"Have you a fixed price?"

"Yes, we will depend on the state where the man is condemned. Some states pay more than others, but the average will be about $400. We can do the work at a fair profit, so let us speak of the sheriff besides."

"What do you advertise?"

"We will first open a correspondence with every sheriff in the United States, and then we will start our business. Then we'll start a few good men on the road with some leading men, and we'll placed them in cities where they'll be death strangled in the latest designs."

They awarded death warrants and show them our styles. We intend to carry a full assortment of styles, and wire rope for hangings, from which the condemned man chooses that is provided by us. The county wants to trade with our house."

"Will you do any taking on of electricity?"

"If it comes into general use in the business, we will furnish the wires, and the motto from the start will be to please, no matter what method is employed, and we trust that the public will be willing to remove a man for so much, and when the doctors pronounce him dead."

"We will do the work ourselves. We will not hang the man twice."

"Professionally trained strungers will be employed. We furnish gallows, ropes, chains, etc., and the gallows will be located at different points throughout the country, with a competent hangman at each point. We will have a portable stand which he can pack and ship at a moment's notice, step into a town, take up a stand, and hang the condemned man. A specified territory will be assigned to each man, who will always be on call."

James Parton, the historian, being asked his opinion of Jackson, in view of Bishop Potter's use of the phrase, "Jackson vulgarized the language of the English members of that time," said: "Andrew Jackson was one of the most vulgar men I ever saw. He possessed a natural dignity and courtliness of bearing, but he was vulgar, Squalid, Vulgar, and Contemptuous. We guarantee them, 25 and 50 cents."
